To the People of the South!

THE OLD "EXAMINER" REVIVED!!

The undersigned, having purchased its good will and subscription books, proposes to revive, at an early day, the old Richmond Examiner, of which the late John M. Daniel was editor-in-chief, and the undersigned his constant associate for the entire period of the war.

It is believed that the public will recognize an appropriate and practical idea in this enterprise.—Effort to revive other papers in the South are announced, and it is certainly neither a visionary nor unworthy endeavour for the literary associates of a gallant spirit that now sleeps in the grave to essay honour to his memory and a service to the public by reviving the old Examiner newspaper, so long the ornament of Southern letters, an example at once of the scholarship and chivalry of Virginia; and perhaps the only school in the South of pure and classic English distinct from the models and redeemed from the innovations of Northern instructors.

The fame of the old Richmond Examiner reached to the most distant parts of the world. The paper was well known in Europe. It was pronounced by a distinguished Northern politician "the best exponent of the civilization of the South." It was a school of literary scholarship for the youth of the South; the glass of Southern chivalry; an example of independence, of courage, of iron spirit in newspaper literature, which its chief illustrated in his own noble and severe life, and defended more than once on the field of honor, when the undersigned stood with in the vindication of the freedom of the press.

Surely there are many people in the South who will unite in an effort to revive a newspaper which was an ornament to its literature and a school for its virtues. The task is an ambitious one. But the undersigned attempts it in no mean or flagging spirit. He has already undertaken to marshal a corps of the old writers for the Examiner; he will be able to reproduce its typographical features, and present to Southern readers a fac simile of their old acquaintance; and he fervently trusts and resolutely pledges every resource of intellect and will to breathe again in this form of material resurrection the same spirit of fearless criticism, chivalrous contest and unhesitating encounter with abuse that animated it of old.

The undersigned owns some pledges of affection in this enterprise. His relations with the late John M. Daniel was close, intimate and affectionate to the day of his death. And it will indeed be a labor and aspiration of love if he can produce some echo from the grave of lamented friendship and rekindle from the ashes of the past and the dead some of the fire that illuminated the familiar pages of our literature.

In the present uncertainty of political questions—the disappointment of old ideas and the imperfect development of the new—it would, of course, be impossible to state with precision the political career of the Examiner. But this may be said with safety; that it will use all its influence in restoring order, tranquility and prosperity to the people; and while aspiring to be brave and independent, it will avoid every scheme of faction and disorganization, devote itself to the works of conservatism, and sustain, at every risk, the present President of the United States as long as he fulfills those noble indications he has already given of planting again the rights of constitutional liberty in the South, setting his face against the Malignants of the North, and thus entitling himself to such common support of conservative men in all parts of the country as will secure the continuation of his wise and patriotic administration.

No pains or expense will be spared to make the Examiner the newspaper of the South. For every department of it the services of the most accomplished and active writers will be secured. Special correspondents will be posted in New York and Washington and other important centres of intelligence in the country. A former active editor of the old Examiner, Edward A. Pollard, will be employed as correspondent from Europe, in which country he proposes to write a History of the War, and to form a familiar acquaintance with the politics of Europe, especially in connection with American questions and topics. This correspondence will constitute a special feature of interest in our paper; it will enliven its columns from week to week with the productions of an animated pen; and it will afford our readers a singularly good opportunity to make themselves acquainted with contemporary Europe, and to apprehend the growing interest of our foreign relations.

The undersigned was recently the editor of the Richmond Times, but in consequence of a disagreement with the proprietor of that paper, he has been forced to leave it and appeal to the civil courts for his rights; and he now proposes to himself the nobler task of reviving a paper endeared to the South by many memories of the past, and associated with so much that is admirable in its heroic and literary name in history. He calls upon the old subscribers of the Examiner, from Virginia to Texas, to rally to its support, to renew their subscriptions, and to assist in the revival of a paper which has existed for three quarters of a century, and which has ever been a solicitor to honor truth and virtue, prompt to chastise abuses, and ambitious to defend and adorn the civilization and literature of the South.

Advertisements will be inserted on the same terms as published by the other Richmond papers.

The first number of the Examiner will contain a sketch of the life of the late John M. Daniel, whose name is historical in connection with the Virginia press, and than whom the annals of newspaper literature in America show few more extraordinary men. Certainly no greater master of vigor and satire in composition. The first number will also contain a full and complete account of the evacuation of Richmond, with all the particulars of the surrender of the city, the entry of the troops, the great conflagration, &c., taken from the advance sheets, E. A. Pollard's "Fourth Year of the War," now in press. This account will be of intensely interesting; and aside from this consideration, every one should secure and preserve these numbers, as they will be valuable hereafter as affording a true and faithful report of what the South has had hitherto but the imperfect narratives which have been written and published in the Northern press.

The old contributors and correspondents of the Examiner are particularly requested to communicate with the undersigned.

All letters and communications of every character should be addressed to Wanted, an Agent in every town in Virginia and all the Southern States.

Also, immediately, twenty active and enterprising men to travel and canvass for the paper—a fine chance for men out of employment.

PROSPECTUS.

THE publication of the NORTH CAROLINA PRESBYTERIAN will be resumed in Fayetteville, on Wednesday 24 January next.

Confidently relying upon the hearty support which we have heretofore received, we shall endeavor to render the paper more attractive, both in appearance and matter, than it has ever been, sparing neither pains nor expense, in the accomplishment of this purpose.

With the passing away of old things, a new spirit of activity, energy and enterprise has been infused into every department of secular thought and business. Why should not the Church, also, partake of this progressive advancement? Why should she, of all the agencies, brought to bear with such tremendous force upon the civilization of the present time, be inefficient, laggard and almost hopeless, in the working out of her own destiny?

To arouse the Church to the importance and necessity of work; of unceasing, restless, tireless energy in the service of her Master and Head; this shall be our first and chiefest aim. In this we need assistance. We are not alone, sufficient for these things. Our brethren must help us in every way; contributions from their own stores of thought and study; by zealous co-operation in a common cause for the benefit of all; by extending our circulation throughout all our borders, and thus giving us both the means and the opportunity of performing well the work to which we have consecrated all that we have, and all that we hope for on the earth.

THE FARMER, A MONTHLY JOURNAL.

DEVOTED TO AGRICULTURE, HORTICULTURE, THE AUXILIARY MECHANIC ARTS, AND TO HOUSEHOLD ECONOMY.

To be Published at Richmond, Va.

The undersigned propose to publish in this city—commencing in January, 1866—a monthly Journal to be styled "The FARMER," whose pages shall be devoted to Agriculture, Horticulture, the auxiliary Mechanic Arts and to Household Economy. A Journal which shall faithfully and successfully represent these cardinal interests by the dissemination of practical information & thorough, sound instruction, will supply a desideratum which is widely and deeply felt in the present exigency of our affairs, and ought, therefore, (we should think) readily to commend itself to popular acceptance, and command, in return, a remunerating patronage. "Faithfully" and "successfully" to support these interests, requires a Journal of the highest order of its kind. It is to nothing short of this high standard of public usefulness that "The Farmer" aspires, and to reach and maintain it, will be an object of unremitting effort and unsparring liberality of expenditure. It seeks recognition as a worthy organ of these cardinal branches of national industry, of which it assumes the special advocacy, and hopes to meet the requirements of the position satisfactorily to those whose interests are more immediately involved.

We are fallen upon times of peculiar and unexampled difficulty. The sudden and violent overthrow of African slavery, without premonition of its near approach, or preparation for the event, interwoven, as it was, with the very texture of our social constitution, has rendered all past experience with respect to the economy and regulation of labor nugatory, razed to its foundation the entire system of Southern agriculture, and necessitated its re-construction and re-organization in accordance with the recent changes in our circumstances and relations. Suddenly launched upon a tempestuous sea of danger and perplexity to guide us, we must, as best we can, improvise the measures which appear at the moment the best adapted to the purposes of present security, and as calmly as we may, await the slow progress of tentative effort and empirical practice for the development of facts and the matured fruits of experience and observation from the careful comparison and generalization of all which, sound principles may be deduced for our future guidance and direction. Then will a new creation of order, harmony and beauty spring out of the chaotic disorder and confusion which now prevail. Then will the desolation and ruin which mar the face of the country be repaired. And not till then shall wholesome and stable rules and regulations control the entire system of husbandry, with its adjuncts and subsidiaries, and give force and efficiency to the administrative measures necessary for the conduction of all its operations to the most satisfactory and profitable results.

To facilitate and promote these important considerations, a good agricultural journal is an obvious necessity. A medium of communication, for the interchange among farmers of views and opinions entertained by them respectively on subjects appertaining to their common calling, is indispensable, and they especially need a vehicle of intelligence for the transmission of the earliest notice of improvement in any department of husbandry, that, by a wide diffusion of such notice, the improvements may be adopted in practice and thus prove a general benefit to the farming fraternity.

Now, to sum up in a word: It is to meet this obvious and pressing necessity that the proprietors propose to publish the above described paper, and in behalf of the undertaking they respectfully solicit the patronage of the public.

The best talent, both practical and theoretical which the country affords, will be commanded in aid of this enterprise, and no expense will be spared in the effort to make the Journal complete in all respects.

It will be printed on good paper and with clear type, and will comprise thirty two pages of reading matter. An advertising sheet of capacity sufficient to accommodate the advertising patronage of the Journal will be added.

Papers disposed to exchange with The Farmer will send their papers at once.

National Thanksgiving Day.

Proclamation by President Johnson.

By the President of the United States of America.

A PROCLAMATION.

Whereas it has pleased Almighty God during the year which is now coming to an end, to relieve our beloved country from the fearful scourge of civil war, and to permit us to secure the blessings of peace, unity and harmony with a great enlargement of civil liberty; And Whereas our Heavenly Father has also during the present year graciously averted from us the calamities of foreign war, pestilence and famine, while our granaries are full of the fruits of an abundant season: And Whereas righteousness exalteth a nation, while sin is a reproach to any people:

Now, therefore, be it known, that I ANDREW JOHNSON, President of the United States, do hereby recommend to the people thereof that they do set apart and observe the first Thursday of December next as a day of National Thanks—given to the Creator of the Universe for these deliverances and blessings. And I do further recommend, that on the occasion the whole people make confession of our national sins against His infinite goodness, and with one heart and one mind implore the Divine guidance in the ways of national virtue and holiness.

In testimony whereof, I have hereunto set my hand, and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

Done at the city of Washington, this twenty-eighth day of October, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and sixty-five, and of the Independence of the U. States of America the nineteenth.

ANDREW JOHNSON.

THE UNION BANNER

SALISBURY, N. C., NOVEMBER 17, 1865

J. J. STEWART.

EDITOR

AGENTS WANTED.

We wish to establish agents in all the counties of this State as well as in all the principal towns and cities both North and South, for the purpose of procuring subscribers to the Daily and Weekly Banner—also, to obtain advertisements.

Editorial Difficulties.

The life of an editor is but little known or appreciated by the world at large. The very circumstance that his journal necessarily embraces men of every shade of opinion, upon every conceivable subject, places him in the predicament of often unintentionally giving offence, when none is intended.

Subscribers often suppose that they pay for a paper to reflect their peculiar views. This is impossible at all times, and, if we may be excused the bull, more so now than ever.

Our political, commercial, and social condition is abnormal.

The old channels of thought, nay even expression, are broken up.

There are so many points bearing with in themselves, every conceivable relation to our welfare, or the reverse, involving the deepest reflection consequent upon analysis and comparison that we may safely allege, without undue arrogance, an editor is perhaps more capable, now than ever to direct public sentiment. The value of the sentiments and opinions, we may express, must depend upon the degree of energy with which he applies his talents and learning to the current events of the day.

His views may to the superficial observer appear too liberal or narrow.—His criticisms upon men or events may appear too flattering or too severe. The policy he advocates may be regarded as too defiant or too yielding.

The public is a critic but not always a fair one. In forming a judgment as to events present or to come, they grope in the dark, as it were. Perhaps a very different judgement would be formed could the public see the subject from the editor's stand point, and viewed by the lights from which he saw it.

We have gaudied for the stakes and lost—all say let us pay up, even to the uttermost farthing. In doing this you do no more than stern honor demands. The North does not expect you to abjure a principle or apostatize from your political faith, but they do expect and have a right to expect, that you will not again put those principles into practice. This is what is meant by the Amnesty Oath.

If you believe in the right of a State to secede, the North does not expect that you should now say that you do not believe it, but they do expect that for the future you will never attempt to put your opinions into practice. You may still believe that the doctrine of secession is the correct exposition of the Federal compact, but you have sworn to discard it practically forevermore—you may believe it neither wrong nor right to hold slaves, but you have sworn to give up slavery.

From this statement it will be perceived that all who have taken the oath, are sworn abolitionists and sworn federalists.

States exist only in name—and to-day North Carolina may be regarded, by a kind of political solecism, as being within the District of Columbia.

"What is the great end of Government?" Public welfare. Do we advance one step nearer this end by factious opposition to those, who by the fortunes of War, are enabled to dictate terms? There was a time when opposition, to many measures, now required, as sine qua non, to re-construction would have been dignified by the appellation of a political creed—now, it is nothing but the incessant cry of 'political charlatans.' Let us look at the matter practically.—What is the practical issue? It is indefinite military rule, or the acceptance on our part of certain terms imposed by the conqueror.

You may revolve the subject as you please, you may view it in all its bearings, you may read Ben Wood's paper week after week, but still that naked alternative stares you in the face. It is inconsistent with all the teachings of history, to hope that the conquered can ever escape the decrees of the conqueror much less dictate terms.

This may seem a departure from the heading of our article, but we allude to these matters to show that an editor through his exchanges and otherwise, and having his whole faculties bent upon the subject, is placed in a more favorable position for observing events, their bearings, tendency and effect than the general reader.

We therefore think, in all fairness, that hasty criticisms of the press should not be indulged in, but due credit given for sincerity of intention and means of knowledge and information. When to these responsibilities, we add the minor annoyances incident to advertisements, job-work, the continual demand for papers, the correcting of proof, the providing for the family and keeping the children straight, we think great allowance should be made for the poor Editor.

Sensitive.

We received a note some days since, making inquiry whether in stating that certain parties were gentlemen we meant to insinuate that other parties were not.

We call that a fine sight, and don't see how such an inference could be drawn except by the reductio ad absurdum (so-called.)

Yost's Store, N. C.
Nov. 15, 1865.

MR. EDITOR:—The elections over and quiet is the general order of the day in political circles. Where there were many in the field it was impossible for all to get an arm into the public crib, and the consequence is; a great deal of repining, regretting, reflecting, resolving and some rejicing. Such is life when placed in the wheel of fortune—she smiles on some while she frowns on others, and the old adage, "where there is a will there is a way," in this case, is rendered impracticable, as we know, they all made great efforts, if we are to judge by the quantity of Spts: Vini Galli stalked on the boards of life on that day. Some felt "good," others "lively," while some felt "glorious," and, to use their own expressions, "were in a weaving way." Some demonstrated their pugilistical powers on the cranium of their antagonist with a slight extraction of the claret, while others were in a more poetical mode and gave us sweet strains like:—

"The harp of Epic song,

Which Homer's fingers thrilled along."

We saw one old friend seated, we presume comfortable, as he told his friends he felt "glorious." He was seated on the streets and was entertaining the auditorium which had congregated around him with his vocal organ, singing:—

"I'm going home, I'm going home."

We naturally inferred that he, too, was "going home" with our Convention "so-called"—yes, "going back home" to the place they declared they had never left. Oh! how "glorious" is this "going home."

But to the result. Dr. Jas. Mott was elected Commoner; Jonas Cline, Sheriff; David Moose, Superior Court Clerk; M. M. Cline, County Court Clerk; Worth some 300 majority. So passed away the day in Catawba County.

General Taxation is making a raid in our locality this week, and has made several captures, taking a great many prisoners by surprise and a few by strategic movements. He completely surrounded General Distiller and his army, when the latter capitulated, agreeing to pay one dollar and fifty cents for every whiskeyman he had in his army. The spirits of General Distiller's army is very much demoralized, and recruits now cost three dollars, and before the capture, only fifty cents. We learn General Convention's army (as soon as they get 'home' and recuperate,) will co-operate with General Taxation, for the purpose of demolishing General Distiller. If they succeed, they undoubtedly will have a "dreadful dry time" at "home."

As we are getting "mighty dry" we had better "dry up" and commence jogging along "a going home."

ROBBED BY HIGHWAYMEN.

Correspondence of the Cincinnati Gazette.

Nashville, November 10.

Governor Brownlow and Colonel Maynard were robbed on the Franklin pike yesterday evening, some ten miles from this city. They were driving carelessly along the road, when three highwaymen suddenly presented themselves. One seized the horse, while the others presented pistols to their heads and demanded their money. As no choice was left, Governor Brownlow handed over five hundred dollars and his watch. They were then permitted to proceed.

ROBBERY IN OHIO.

The house of two bachelor brothers named Hess was entered, and after having chloroform administered to them, they were robbed of the above amount. No clue to the perpetrators has yet been obtained.

ROBERT E. LEE.

"I enclose you an editorial taken from the Daily Telegraph of this city, containing such a happy tribute to General Lee, that I hope you will publish it in the Whig."—Extract from a letter, dated London, Oct. 21.

At Lexington, in the State of Virginia, there is a College which bears the name of the most illustrious citizen ever born in the "old Dominion" fertile as that pleasant land has been in heroes; no could George Washington himself have wished the College erected in his honor should have for President a worthier chief than the one who quietly entered upon his duties just a fortnight ago. The new President is still in the prime of manhood though already his hair and beard are grey; he has been long accustomed to command; he is familiar with hardships as with fame,—he has slept for months amid the woods of Virginia, and has crossed the Rappahannock northward at the head of a victorious army; he has proved alike by good and evil fortune, and, whether when threatening the Federal Capitol or when surrendering his sword to a Federal captain, he has ever borne himself as be-seemed a man noble alike by ancestry and by nature. The descendant of "Light Horn Harry" has defied the grey uniform for the garb of a peaceful professor; nor can we own that the change is a degradation, even for Robert Lee. There is a difference in the mode of action, but no alteration in the object, which is simply to render the best service he can to his native State. To that single aim he has never once been unfaithful; and he will still pursue it, we may rest assured, with the old high enthusiasm, tempered by a cautious brain.—Throughout the war nothing was more remarkable than Lee's personal influence.—The manner in which he impressed every one who approached him. That men with Jackson's purity and earnestness, or with the debonaire and graceful valor of Stewart, should appreciate the illustrious qualities of their leader, was only natural; but even the humblest soldiers in the ranks felt, though they might not have been able to express, the moral power which Lee exerted. The war was, in all conscience, sanguinary enough; but there would have been a very carnival of carnage, a devilish out-break of all man's fiercest passions, had the Southern leaders been of different temper. Galantly as the Confederates fought, we must never forget that their armies were often composed of somewhat questionable raw material; that the volunteers, with all the instinct of bravery which seldom deserts a dominant class, had likewise many of the vices which are inevitably engendered by the possession of arbitrary and lawless power. Accustomed to the unchecked license of authority, the slaveholders might perchance have been ready enough to give the war a character of internecine hatred; and it was eminently due to Robert Lee that the courtesies and humanities of civilized warfare were, on the whole, observed. The gentle nature of the man never degenerated into weakness; with a high hand he could restrain excesses, and admirably did he exercise his power. There are no purer pages in the history of the civil war than those which relate to his invasion of Maryland and Pennsylvania, at a time when the temper of the Southern people was sorely tried. Such qualities as he displayed could not fail, in the long run, to win the regard of the manly and affectionate people; and whilst we find that he was loved like a father by all those who shared his immediate perils, we have not yet forgotten that when the victorious veterans of the North were marching home through Richmond, they burst into a splendid shout of enthusiasm as they recognized, gravely contemplating them from a curtained window, the familiar form and face of Robert Lee.

"The old order changes, giving place to a new, and God fulfils himself in many ways." To teach young lads their classics and mathematics may seem but a poor occupation for one whose world was lately the supreme law for a hundred thousand fighting men; and there need be no sense of humiliation involved in the deliberate acceptance of such employment. The "new order" is that of peace; for a time, the finest thing that Lee could do was to set an example of valor and virtue to the whole manhood of the South; but not less pure is the glory of who by honest and patient labor prepares the young for that longer conflict which fills the whole length and breadth of human life. Our age, to quote the French phrase, is "fertile in emotions," is swift and sudden in its changes. The ruler of yesterday is the exile of to-day. The exile of to-day may be the ruler of to-morrow. Many a bright sword is in its scabbard besides that of the great Virginian. Only a few weeks ago the FLAHERS of Paris could gaze on one whom Victor Hugo called "a spectre in a white tunic"—on one who for years fought after the old Numidian fashion against Bugeaud and Budeau, against Cavaignac, Pelissier and Lamoriciere; and now, the survivor of the great Abd-el-Kader, journeys slowly homeward to Damascus. In a Russian city far within the heart of the mighty empire whose power he withstood for nearly thirty years, quietly lives an old grey-bearded, weak-eyed man, against whom, when he held possession of his mountain fastnesses, Grabis and Woronzoff vainly hurled their disciplined battalions; and so calm is now the order of his life that only with a strange thrill of wonder does the traveller hear that he has indeed Selamyl the Checcian. The hero of Rome, Varesse, and Marsala hups about along the rocky pathways of Caprea. What English tourist on the Continent who usually meets George Klappa remembers immediately the exploits of the man who held Comorn against the Austrian and once sallied forth as far as Raab on the road to Vienna itself? The actions of these leaders are already passing into history, and may surely be viewed with historic impartiality and calm. Bosten like them, Lee serenely accepts the altered conditions of his life. Had he consulted a poor and outworn feeling of "personal dignity," he would have left the country in which he had held command so absolute, and suffered a discomfiture so overwhelming. By men of all parties in Europe he would have been hailed with acclamation; he would have found it impossible to remain in privacy; he would have felt again the breath of popular applause—but to what good end? The welcome must needs have been misropresented across the Atlantic, and have tended, however unfairly, to excite an angry feeling. Lee as an exile, as a refugee, would have been a living protest against the Government which proscribed him; President of a College in Virginia, he lends the aid of his illustrious name to the good work of reconciliation.

Marvellous, indeed, despite the troubles which remain, is the spectacle presented by America after her mighty struggle. The shiftest and most dexterous of races, if not the strongest, our Yankee friends are falling, as if by some natural law of gravitation, into their proper places; and there is something really wonderful in their versatility.—The general, telling his wife to take care of his epaulettes, quietly turns lawyer or merchant; the soldier goes back to the farm or the loom; and two mighty armies have hitherto scarcely shown a sign of disorder during the trying time of disbandment. The explanation of all this must not be sought in "institutions" or "constitutions" but in those grand natural capacities of the land itself, which no labor or wit of man created, which no violence of man could altogether destroy. In that immense continent there is room for all; and no one with any real capacity has long to wait before he finds his place. Few other countries could have sustained the recent contest without utter ruin; in America the wounds are healing almost before the swords are sheathed. Nor let us forget, as we contemplate the significant scene of generals devoting themselves to civil pursuits, that the national character must have been potentially effected by the events of the last five years. Many of life's most important lessons can only be learnt through the stern discipline of battle; and a people which had never passed through the lurid cloud of desolation and of death might indeed have rioted in all the insolent extravagance of material prosperity, but would never have been in the high meaning of the term, a nation. It is unphilosophical to believe that the American character has been radically altered; it is not less unphilosophical to assume that it has not been greatly modified. The old forms of action the old political organizations, the old party names, may yet survive; but a new spirit has been breathed into them all. On the race as on the individual the charm has worked, and we shall probably, for the future, find a graver and more serious tone in the countenances of that jesting President who by sheer honesty of meaning, had acquired a statesman's reputation when he perished by a martyr's death, and of that Southern tailor from Tennessee, who has already approved himself a skilful and a resolute ruler. Lee's nature underwent no change; it simply retains its serene nobility. For the rest, "let the dead bury their dead." Our business is with the present and the future.—The signs of war, though they cannot utterly disappear, may fade away with singular rapidity in that young land, where all things grow so swiftly, from corn and maize up to men and women. The traveler in the prairies of the West, camping amidst the long luxuriant grass, may almost smile, as he tells him how on that very spot the Indians fought—how he might yet find traces of the conflict in rusty tomahawk and in broken bow. It was not a long time ago; but meanwhile the land is very rich, and the grass is very green.

PROPOSALS FOR CARRYING THE MAILS.

We publish below proposals for carrying the mails weekly to the County seats of this State, until the first of January next. We trust that persons who may be disposed to make proposals will do so at once, as mails are very much needed. We learn that ten dollars per mile will be allowed for this temporary service. The post offices on the various lines will be supplied, and it is desirable that postmasters be appointed at once. Proposals for any of these routes, and nominations for Postmasters, may be addressed to Gov. Holden, to be forwarded by him to Washington. Persons who may propose to carry the mails must offer the necessary evidence that they will comply with their contracts; and nominations for Postmasters must be endorsed by loyal men, known to the Governor. Females may act as Postmasters, and there is no objection to appointing them.

The advertisement for the regular mail service in this State will appear soon.

We learn that the granting of this special temporary mail service is due to the indefatigable exertions of Dr. R. J. Powell, the State Agent in Washington, aided by W. S. Mason and W. J. Palmer, Esq's. of this city. We believe that no such favor has been extended to any other State.

The Watchman.

THE subscriber proposes to commence in the city of New York, at an early date, the publication of a weekly Journal, to take the highest practicable position on its line of Literature. Each number will contain eight large pages, with six columns to each page, printed on excellent paper in a superior style of photography, and so folded that it may be bound.

It will discuss all the current topics of Religion, Sociology, Science, Art, Politics, Commerce, Finance and Agriculture, liberally, carefully, thoroughly, and from a broad platform far above all par-tisanism. While the entire control of the work will be in the hands of the Editor, he hopes to have a circulation which will enable him to secure in its several departments the best aid which America and Europe can afford.

Faithful to his own Denomination, he trusts that he is so well known in all the Churches for liberality, that any publication of his may unhesitatingly be sent into the families of any Christian community. It may be the mission of this Journal to make all Christians see one another in a lovelier light. The subscriber has an earnest desire, and will make a hearty effort, to produce such a publication that where a family can take only one paper, this will more nearly supply
all its wants than any other. A Home Gazette, a Repertory of all the best current Literature, a Summary of all important Intelligence in every department of Human Efforts, a Journal of Progress, an Advocate of Truth in all things, a Friend, a Guide, a Blessing—this is what "The Watchman" is intended to become.

The Editor has never been a partisan, and expects the discussion of politics in his journal to have to do mainly with its higher aspects and questions. The only desirable and permanent Union of States or of churches is a union upon the basis of an affectionate reception of a fundamental, political, or moral and religious truths with a hearty hatred of all certain error, and a generous absence of all fanaticism and strife in regard to what is not essential to political common weal or spiritual salvation. Into this happy unity the "Watchman" will labor to bring all within the reach of its influence.

This journal will afford a common meeting ground for Southern men of all views and thus keep our people in one portion of the South informed of the sentiments and views of those in other parts. It will present to other sections of the U. States a clear view of the animus of our people.
It will thus secure the South justice and support without promoting sectionalism.

Many reasons unnecessary to state have led many influential persons to the belief that the interests of the South and of the whole country will be greatly promoted by issuing the publication from New York.

The price is put at $2 for the first six months, or $1 for the first three months.
No subscription received for less than three, or more than six months. These terms allow one to subscribe for several copies for a short time, for general distribution. The first person who responded to a circular issued just before this prospectus, subscribed for 20 copies to distribute North and South. Write plainly the name, the post office, and number of copies and the length of time, and address.

HEADQUARTERS, District W. N. C.,
Salisbury, N. C., Nov. 11th, 1865.

GENERAL ORDERS,
No. 3.
Most of the misconduct of the troops in this District, has been occasioned by the use of intoxicating liquor. This liquor in most cases is procured from citizens.

The Col. Commanding the District is sincerely desires of securing discipline among the troops, but it is well nigh impossible to do so, while the principal cause of the difficulty is furnished by the citizens, themselves.

It is hereby directed that all persons, who shall sell, barter, or give away to any soldier, any intoxicating liquor, of any kind whatsoever shall be arrested, and tried by a Provost Court, and on being found guilty shall be punished by fine or imprisonment, or both.

All officers, are strictly enjoined to use every exertion to ferret out and bring to punishment those who may violate this order, and all good citizens, are earnestly requested to aid in its execution.

By Command of
COL. JASPER PACKARD.
